QATAR will open new civil defence centres to cater to the needs of the rising population and the urban development growth, said Director of General Directorate of Civil Defence (GDCCD) Staff Brigadier Abdullah Mohammed al Suwaidi.

Al Suwaidi made the announcement during the inauguration ceremony of a new civil defence centre named Ghanim al Qadeem Civil Defence Station on Wednesday. The new station is located on the intersection of B Ring Road and Airport Road, opposite Capital Security Department.

The station was inaugurated by the Minister of State for Interior Affairs HE Sheikh Abdullah bin Nasser bin Khalifa al Thani.

Talking to the media, al Suwaidi said more stations will be opened in the near future. "We will be opening new centres in the future to enhance urban growth and development. A new centre will be opened within the next four months. It is located next to the Al Ahli hospital," al Suwaidi said.

Describing the newly-opened station, al Suwaidi said the centre will be in full operation from next week. The centre houses employees' accommodation on its premises, he said.

Al Suwaidi also said, "The new centre is bigger than other centers. The station will reduce the load of the Wadil al-Sail civil defence centre and will support other stations as well. The centre will be able to accommodate 240 employees."

The new five-storeyed building has several facilities including operations room, room for breathing apparatus, several offices, car parking, multi-purpose workshop and pumping room as well as accommodation facility for 240 people and gymnasium. It also has lecture rooms, lounge, prayer room, warehouses, emergency rest rooms, laundry, kitchen, canteen facility and five trucks.

Women in Qatar seek breast cancer treatment in late stages: Study

MOHAMED KHOULAIDI
DOHA

A RECENT study published in Avicenna, an open access peer reviewed journal from QScience.com and headed by Dr Tam Truong Donnelly of the University of Calgary-Qatar, shows that women in Qatar often seek medical treatment for breast cancer symptoms in late stages of the disease.

The study highlights a direct statistical link between early detection of breast cancer by prescreening and improved prognosis and shows a low rate of participation in prescreening among Arabic women in Qatar. The Qatar-based research team has embarked on a three-year investigation of local mindsets and ways to encourage more prescreening among women in the country and the region.

"It is widely understood throughout the medical community and many parts of the world that early detection greatly improves the prognosis in breast cancer patients," said Donnelly. "We want to understand why women in Qatar are not aware of or participating in prescreening activities and what culturally-appropriate and effective strategies will help change this."

According to the study, the causes of breast cancer can be many and are difficult to assess case-by-case. In addition to genetic predisposition, the rising incidence rate in Qatar may be associated with lifestyle factors such as fatty diets, physical inactivity, smoking and low rate of breastfeeding.

"Over the past decade, Qatar has undergone tremendous change socially," Donnelly said. "Adoption of a western lifestyle as well as improvements in healthcare and higher levels of awareness and screening around cancer can all factor into the increased reported rate of the disease. In any case, we need to do more now to promote healthy lifestyle and to lower its mortality rate because women here are facing a great threat."

The team will continue with the Phase One of the study for three years.

The other experts in the study include Dr al Hareth al Khater, Chairman of Hamad Medical Corporation's Medical Research Center; Dr Mohamed al Kuwari, of the Supreme Council of Health; Dr Nabila al Meer, Executive Director of HMC's Department of Nursing; Dr Salha Bujassoum, Senior Consultant of hematology/oncology at Al Amal Hospital; Dr Maryam Abdul Malik, Director of Primary Health Care at Qatar's Supreme Council of Health; Dr Rajvir Singh, Senior Consultant at HMC's Medical Research Center; Floor Christie-de Jong, research associate at the University of Calgary-Qatar, and a team of research assistants.

The team will continue with the Phase One of the study, which began in March of 2011, for three years.

QF, QUWIC join hands for environment monitoring

TRIBUNE NEWS NETWORK
DOHA

THE QU Wireless Innovations Center (QUWIC) at the Qatar Science & Technology Park (QSTP), and the Health, Safety, Security & Environment (HSSE) Directorate of Qatar Foundation for Education, Science and Community Development have announced the signing of a memorandum of understanding (MoU) to carry out a field trial of the Qatar Air Pollution Surveillance System (QAPSS) developed by the QUWIC.

This MoU will further both parties' interests in the development and deployment of innovative, flexible, and cost effective air quality monitoring system and applications.

The agreement was signed in QUWIC's office by Dr Adnan Abu-Dayya, executive director of QUWIC, and Ahmed Saeed al Hajri, manager of security on behalf of Abdulla al Modhaki, director of HSSE at Qatar Foundation. The QAPSS is a rich and flexible platform built by QUWIC to support real time monitoring of air quality and other environment conditions. It will allow users to access such information through innovative applications which can be accessed through multiple channels, including mobile delivery, web, SMS, and voice interaction. A rich demo version of the QAPSS was developed by QUWIC earlier this year, and based on the interest shown by many partners, QUWIC is moving to the next stage of building a pilot version that will be used in field trials later this year.

Dr Abu-Dayya said: "We are glad to partner with the QF to drive our environmental initiative as both of us share a common vision of improving environmental awareness using state-of-the-art technologies. This is in line with QUWIC's strategy to build regional platform for innovations and it supports our activities in the area of developing relevant regional environmental solutions."

As part of the MoU, both parties will collaborate to carry out a field trial using QUWIC's QAPSS solution in Education City towards the end of this year. The field trial will include the deployment of multiple sensors with different functionalities. The data will be collected by the sensors wirelessly and processed by QUWIC's Intelligent Sensing Platform that will provide air quality information in real-time. This information then will be accessed through innovative web and mobile applications as well as pre-defined alerting mechanisms."

The MoU will allow both parties to exchange information and expertise with the objectives of enhancing and improving the Qatar Air Pollution Surveillance System developed by the QUWIC.

"This is another step towards building our national eco-system that supports wireless innovations across all sectors. The environmental sector is a key area of interest for us and we are proud to be working with a leading national organisation such as QF on this initiative" added Dr Abu Dayya.

"We are excited about this agreement with the QUWIC. As a leading national organisation, our aim is to help creating a better environment for all people in Qatar and that starts by our own work environment. Having a solution that delivers real time information about air quality will enable us to react efficiently to maintain the best standards of air quality within our premises," said Abdulla al Modhaki, director of HSSE at Qatar Foundation.

HMC hospitals start using world-class imaging tech

TRIBUNE NEWS NETWORK
DOHA

HAMAD Medical Corporation (HMC) has implemented a multi-site Radiology Information Systems (RIS) and Picture Archiving and Communications System (PACS) from GE Healthcare across its seven hospitals.

The project enables clinicians to move from using traditional X-ray film to accessing their patients' image records on their screens by the touch of a button. The new system will facilitate improved diagnosis and patient care capabilities.

The RIS/PACS solution provides an integrated view of the patient's imaging records. Advanced image processing tools allow doctors and other health professionals to access and compare images in order to decide on the best treatments for their patients. Providing access to images at the desktop for referring physicians as soon as the patient's examination has been completed, significantly enhances patient management, allows more timely diagnosis and clinical management to be initiated, and reduces the need to wait for or locate x-ray film bags.

Dr Ahmed J Omar, acting chairman of radiology at HMC, said the new system would facilitate improved diagnosis and patient care capabilities. "Imaging is becoming increasingly integral to preventive and treatment management practices. The system allows for easy access of comprehensive diagnostic information by physicians and other care providers, which enables faster patient management decision making. We placed great emphasis on not only implementing the technology but ensuring relevant training for all clinicians," he said.

The project was managed by HMC's Radiology and Health Information Systems departments, with technical and project management assistance from Malomatia.

Abdullah al Emadi, executive director of Health Information System (HIS) at HMC, said: "Key members from the Clinicians Group, Radiology and Health Information Systems departments worked closely together to ensure the successful completion of this very large and complex project. I am delighted that we were able to roll this system out throughout the seven hospitals in less than a year and a half. This is a record achievement in the global healthcare sector and reflects the achievement of a key milestone in HMC's strategic IT plan."

The new fully web-based system enables images such as x-rays and scans to be stored electronically and viewed on any PC across the HMC.

The new fully web-based system enables images such as x-rays and scans to be stored electronically and viewed on any PC across the HMC, irrespective of where the image has been captured, creating a near filmless process tailored for healthcare environments. The first of its kind in Qatar, this technology combines flexibility and interoperability between different imaging devices and a stable infrastructure that will help maximise efficiency and improve the quality of patient services within HMC.

CHIEF OF STAFF WITH US COMMANDER

Chief of Staff of Qatari Armed Forces Major General Hamad bin Ali al Attiyah with Major General Charles T Cleveland, head of the special-operations component of US Central Command, in Doha, on Wednesday. They discussed military cooperation between Qatar and the United States.

QCCI supports transport, railways & logistics expo

MOHAMED KHOULAIDI
DOHA

THE Qatar Chamber of Commerce & Industry (QCCI) recently announced its support for Qatar International Exhibition for Transport and Logistics 2011 (Trans4-2011) which will take place at the Doha International Exhibition Center from October 17 to 19. The exhibition will be part of the GCC Transport and Railways Conference.

QCCI Chairman Sheikh Khalifa bin Jassim bin Mohamed al Thani spoke of the importance of transport and logistics in economic and social developmental strategies and highlighted role of the QCCI in attracting investments to this vital sector.

Sheikh Khalifa said, "It gives us great pleasure to be one of the first supporters of TRANS4-2011. The transport sector is very pivotal in all industrial, construction, mega and all 2022 World Cup related projects."

He said these projects have attracted foreign companies to set up business in the country to take advantage of the available investment opportunities.

The QCCI chairman also said that the conferences and exhibitions sector plays a huge role in attracting foreign investments and that the chamber was considered a main window through which foreign businessmen recognise the Qatari market.

It is a professional platform where transport and logistics industry leaders can network with local policy and decision makers.

The exhibition will give visitors a closer look at the entire value chain in transport and logistics - railways, shipping, and freight - at a single location.

Exhibitors from different countries will showcase their products and technologies and interact with decision-makers in all sectors of the transport and logistics industry.

Transport related projects occupy pre-eminent position in Qatar's infrastructure plans. With investments in the New Doha International Airport, New Doha Port, and several new projects currently under construction, the government has already shown its commitment to invest in transportation projects.

Qatar has committed to building more than $40 billion worth of transport infrastructure, including plans for rail projects worth $25 billion. In addition to the Doha Metro, the plans include high-speed rail links between New Doha International Airport, Doha city centre and a light rail system connecting new cities.

New Indian restaurant to open at Al Wakrah

SANTHOSH CHANDRAN
DOHA

A NEW Indian restaurant, Royal Palace, will open at Al Wakrah on Friday. Located near the Pearl roundabout, it will serve south and north Indian, Chinese and Continental dishes.

Speaking at a press conference on Wednesday, Musthaffa, a member of its board of directors, said, "The restaurant will be one of the largest Indian restaurants in Al Wakrah. The ground floor will accommodate 70 people at a time."

According to him, the banquet hall on the first floor can accommodate 400 people.

"For those looking for a place for family get-togethers, the banquet hall will be ideal for such gatherings," Musthaffa said.

It will host the typical Kerala feast with 17 varieties of dishes every Friday and Saturday.

A stage programme will be organised in the banquet hall of the restaurant on Friday. Noted singers Rehna and Kannur Sheriff will perform on the occasion. The press conference was also attended by Muhammad, another member of the restaurant's board of directors.
